May Commentary

The Trust produced a Net Asset Value total return of +3.0% during the month and a price total return of +4.2%, compared to a return of +3.4% for the Lipper Global – Equity Global Income Index.

We spent several days this month in the US at a conference meeting companies. As ever one cannot fail to be impressed by the sheer scale, dynamism and competitive zeal of US corporates and the wider economy. Several current and potential investments for the strategy and the Troy investment universe were present and we came away with plenty to think about.

In addition to the individual company presentations, a few themes stood out. First was the apparent disconnect between the uncertainty surrounding the current macro-economic backdrop and what companies were seeing at the micro level. While there was widespread angst relating to tariffs, the unpredictability of policymaking and the stress on the consumer, this had yet to show up in end demand. This paradox was summed up well by Steve Squeri, the highly regarded CEO of American Express, who said sentiment surveys were depressed while consumption remained robust – or as he put it, people were “complaining as they go spend”. Maybe this is a comment on modern life, but it does seem that one way or another this divergence will have to be bridged either by sentiment improving or spending slowing.

Second was the extent to which companies are thinking hard about how to deploy AI in their business to make meaningful productivity improvements and cost savings. Ironically while AI is likely to be a highly disruptive force in the economy, it seems the companies that are best placed to be able to exploit the technology are the large incumbent businesses. This contrasts with the internet where often the opposite was the case.

Third, it was notable how prominent a role was played by Private Equity and Private Credit companies. On our reckoning it was the single best represented sector by number of companies present and the most optimistic on the outlook for their industry. While we acknowledge that these companies have formidable competitive advantages and very profitable business models, our contrarian streak cannot help but be triggered by this occurrence. Perhaps we have seen “peak private” for this cycle.

Finally, and remarkably, not one company mentioned the word “Trump”.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

Please refer to Troy's Glossary of Investment terms here. Performance data relating to the NAV is calculated net of fees with income reinvested unless stated otherwise. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. Overseas investments may be affected by movements in currency exchange rates. The value of an investment and any income from it may fall as well as rise and investors may get back less than they invested. The historic yield reflects distributions declared over the past twelve months as a percentage of the Trust's price, as at the date shown. It does not include any preliminary charge and investors may be subject to tax on their distributions. Tax legislation and the levels of relief from taxation can change at any time. The yield is not guaranteed and will fluctuate. There is no guarantee that the objective of the investments will be met. Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as "gearing". The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets. Shares in an Investment Trust are listed on the London Stock Exchange and their price is affected by supply and demand. This means that the share price may be different from the NAV. Information on the risks of an investment in the fund can be found in the Prospectus.
