October Commentary

The Trust produced a Net Asset Value total return of +6.8% during the month and a price total return of +5.1%, compared to a return of +1.0% for the Lipper Global – Equity Global Income Index.

This month saw a reversal of the key trend which has been driving equity, and increasingly debt, markets around the world. While the headline index declined only slightly the rotation under the surface was notable. Having experienced a similar market dynamic in July, we once again saw what happens when doubts arise around the scale of capital being deployed into the AI infrastructure build out. Owing to the dominance of the AI theme in markets, the economy and consumption via the wealth effect, its reversal is striking.

Several company specific announcements fuelled the decline in share prices. Alphabet missed earnings and revenue forecasts as AI spending reduced free cashflow and warned of a significant rise in capex in 2027. Meta raised the low end of its capex forecast and created a new non-voting share class to help fund AI spending. Amazon and Intel earnings then triggered further cashflow worries on the final day of the month. It was also reported that Anthropic investors were discussing a lower IPO valuation after its revenue growth slowed. In Asia, China's CXMT announced progress on advanced memory chips, adding competitive pressure. The combination of the heavy investments, for which the market is growing tired, together with gathering Chinese competition – our key concerns – is evident in this news flow.

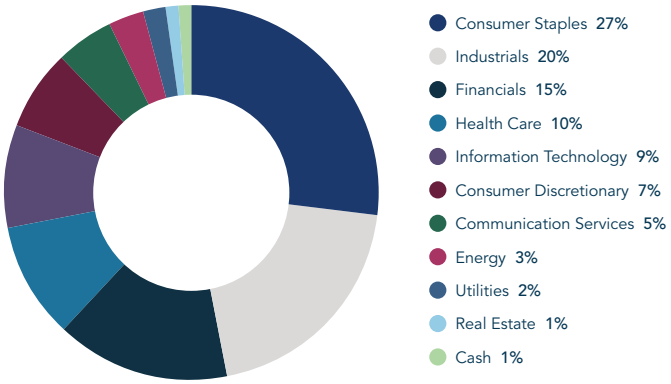

Hence the worst performing sectors were Information Technology, Communication Services (which includes companies such as Meta and Alphabet) and Industrials whereas Energy (which is responding on an idiosyncratic basis to events in Iran), Consumer Staples and Healthcare were strong. The Philadelphia Semiconductor Index declined by 15.3% (in USD). This clearly benefitted the performance of the Trust. The top five performers in the portfolio were Imperial Brands (+20.2%), RELX (+19.9%), CTS Eventim (+19.5%), Rentokil (+17.8%) and Roche (+16.2%).

It is too early to say if this is simply a market wobble or a more serious turning point. But the lopsided nature of the market and the value of diversification have been demonstrated by recent events.

Important Information

Please refer to Troy's Glossary of Investment terms here. Performance data relating to the NAV is calculated net of fees with income reinvested unless stated otherwise. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. Overseas investments may be affected by movements in currency exchange rates. The value of an investment and any income from it may fall as well as rise and investors may get back less than they invested. The historic yield reflects distributions declared over the past twelve months as a percentage of the Trust's price, as at the date shown. It does not include any preliminary charge and investors may be subject to tax on their distributions. Tax legislation and the levels of relief from taxation can change at any time. The yield is not guaranteed and will fluctuate. There is no guarantee that the objective of the investments will be met. Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as "gearing". The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets. Shares in an Investment Trust are listed on the London Stock Exchange and their price is affected by supply and demand. This means that the share price may be different from the NAV. Information on the risks of an investment in the Trust can be found in the Prospectus.
